Transvalair achieves Full AEO Accreditation

The introduction of the Authorised Economic Operator is a key element in the new EU customs regulations being introduced May 2016, making supply chains more secure and controlled from origin through to final destination.

Authorised Economic Operators enjoy a number of privileges and the AEO certificate also leads to indirect benefits due to improvements in safety and security standards within the company.

Some of the benefits our accreditation gives to our partners;

Fewer physical and document based customs controls

Priority treatment of consignments if selected for control

AEO's are able to benefit from simplified customs procedures

Mutual recognition from countries such as; China, USA, Japan, Norway, Switzerland and all EU Countries

AEO's are recognised as a safe and secure business partner

Case Study

Time Sensitive Two Man Deliveries

Transvalair Group launched a new project for a well known e-commerce company that demanded high standards of customer service and very specific delivery procedures.

To meet the required procedures we developed and expanded our haulage capabilities and delivery service for our operations for the South East, South West and North East of England as well as Scotland.

Our strength and ability to adapt to new challenges led to the employment of 100 new members of staff, the acquisition of 35 new trucks to the fleet and the new offering of a two man home delivery team. Offering the best quality of delivery and customer service.
